This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. LETTER OF SUBMITTAL.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
BUREAU OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC COMMERCE,
Washington, October 1, 1915.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith a trade directory of Central America and the West Indies compiled in this Bureau from lists furnished by American consular officers. These lists of merchants and importers in Central America and the West Indies have been thoroughly revised and rearranged according to uniform classifications. This directory is issued to meet a popular demand for such a publication and in the hope that it will prove of material assistance to American business houses in developing their trade with the countries included.

Respectfully,

E. E. PRATT,
Chief of Bureau.

To Hon. WILLIAM C. REDFIELD,
Secretary of Commerce.

SYMBOLS.

Manufacturers are designated by a dagger (†); importers by an asterisk (*). Names of dealers bear no symbol. It is assumed that importers are dealers, either wholesale or retail, or both. The symbol follows the name of the article if all the names listed under it are those of manufacturers or importers, as the case may be.

TRADE DIRECTORY OF CENTRAL AMERICA AND THE WEST INDIES.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

BRITISH HONDURAS.

British Honduras is a Crown colony on the Caribbean Sea, south of Yucatan, and 660 miles west from Jamaica, noted for its production of mahogany and logwood. It has a total area of about 8,598 square miles. The population was officially estimated at 41,000 in December, 1912. The imports into British Honduras are principally foodstuffs, cotton goods, drugs, shoes, lumber, camp supplies, and the usual goods needed in a tropical country. The principal exports are mahogany, cedar, logwood, chicle, bananas, and coconuts. The only manufacturing industries in the colony are sugar making and rum distilling. Mail communication with the United States is weekly, via New Orleans. Telegraphic service is overland to Puerto Mexico, thence by cable to Galveston, Tex. A wireless station is now in service.

BELIZE.

Belize is the capital of British Honduras and the port from which all exports are cleared. There are subports of entry at Stann Creek and Punta Gorda, both small villages on the coast, but the customs entries at these places are few in number and small in value. Belize is the port of the colony, with a population of 10,478.

COSTA RICA.

Costa Rica, a southern Republic of Central America, contains some rich gold mines which are still worked. Silver, copper, iron, lead, and coal are also found here. The exports, according to official statistics amounted to $8,924,191 in 1911, and consisted of bananas, coffee, gold and silver, timber, cocoa, hides, and cattle; while the imports, which consisted of cotton goods, flour, railway material, lard, coal, drugs, rice, silk goods, lumber, and structural iron and steel, amounted to $8,872,161. The vessels of the Hamburg-American Line (Atlas service) have a weekly service between Port Limon and New York, calling twice a month at Colon, Kingston, and Santiago de Cuba. The banana and passenger steamships of the United Fruit Co. sail weekly from Limon to Boston, and at least twice weekly to New Orleans or Mobile. The Northern Railway of Costa Rica connects San Jose with Limon on the Atlantic. There are American consulates at Port Limon and San Jose, and a consular agency at Puntarenas.

PORT LIMON.

Port Limon, Costa Rica's principal port and one of the most important in Central America, is 104 miles east of San Jose, the capital, on the Northern Railway. Last year 497 steamships of large tonnage and 100 small craft cleared from this port. The import trade increased $1,000,000 from 1912 to 1913, when the United States furnished 52 per cent of the merchandise. Bananas form 97 per cent of the products of the Limon district. Although still in its infancy, cacao is a promising industry. There is an American consulate at this place.

GUATEMALA.

Guatemala, the northernmost of the independent States of Central America, has an area of about 45,000 square miles and a population estimated at 2,000,000, of which about two-thirds are Indians, the greater proportion of the remainder being half-castes. The soil is fertile, and agriculture is the principal industry—in fact, almost the only one. The principal crop is coffee, while sugar cane, bananas, and, to a lesser extent, cacao and tobacco are extensively cultivated. Manufactures are almost negligible, and supply certain local wants only. The International Railway of Central America runs from Puerto Barrios, on the Caribbean coast, to Guatemala City, with branches thence to San Jose, Champerico, and Ocos on the Pacific coast and Ayutla on the Mexican border.

Exports in 1913 were a little over $14,000,000, of which Germany took slightly over half, the United States following, and Great Britain third. The most important item was coffee, valued at $12,254,000, while hides, timber, bananas, and sugar reached respectable totals. Imports for the same time were a little less than $8,000,000, the most important items being foodstuffs, textiles, and manufactures of metals. The United States supplied more than 50 per cent of the imports, Germany 20 per cent, and Great Britain 18 per cent. The capital is Guatemala City, 196 miles from Puerto Barrios.

HONDURAS.

Honduras is the third largest of the five Central American Republics and the most central in point of location. For the purpose of correspondence and shipping it is often directed as Spanish Honduras, in order to avoid confusing with British Honduras in the nearby Yucatan Peninsula. The population in 1913 was 592,626. Area, 46,250 square miles. Capital, Tegucigalpa. The Republic is divided into 17 departments (States), each having a resident governor. The National Congress, consisting of a deputy for every 10,000 inhabitants, meets every January for a 60-day session.

The country is mountainous, from an average elevation of 3,500 feet along the continental divide to sea level on the Gulf and Pacific coasts. There are no railroads except a few short lines on the north coast. The principal exports of the country are bananas, coconuts, lumber, and hides from the north coast and gold, silver, and hides from the southern and central portions. The country is well adapted for cattle raising.

AMAPALA.

Amapala, the only Pacific port, is located on an island in the Bay of Fonseca. It is the port of entry for all merchandise destined for Tegucigalpa and vicinity. Merchandise for the interior must be lightered 25 miles to the mainland and then hauled or carried 90 miles to the capital by carts or mule back. Population, 2,500. An American consular agency is located here.

TEGUCIGALPA.

Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, is situated 90 miles from the Pacific port of Amapala, at an elevation of 3,200 feet above sea level. A fine automobile road connects with the coast. All freight and heavy mail must come via Pacific port. Letter mail is sent by weekly service from Puerto Cortes on the north coast, a six-day trip by courier. The population is 23,500, but the town of Comayaguela, separated from the capital by a river, over which is a connecting bridge, has an additional population of 7,500. For all mail purposes, Tegucigalpa is the post-office address for both places. There is an American consul here.

TELA.

Tela is a port of entry on the north coast of Honduras. It is the terminus of some 70 miles of railroad running into rich banana lands. It has an open roadstead on the Caribbean Sea. It has a modern dock about 1,500 feet long extending into the sea. There is a weekly steamship service to New Orleans and a biweekly service to New York, via Puerto Barrios, maintained by vessels of the United Fruit Co. The leading industry is the export of bananas, but some coconuts and other tropical products are shipped. The population is estimated at about 2,000. An American consular agency is located here.

NICARAGUA.

The Republic of Nicaragua has an area of 49,200 square miles, and its population is approximately 500,000. At least 75 per cent of the inhabitants live in the western half of the country. Western Nicaragua has two seaports, Corinto and San Juan del Sur, of which the former is by far the more important and has railway communication with the cities of Chinandega, Leon, Managua, Masaya, and Granada, and with about 26 smaller towns and villages. The eastern half of the Republic has the seaports of Bluefields, Cape Gracias a Dios, Pearl Lagoon, and San Juan del Norte. Bluefields (population, about 4,000) is the only town of any importance in the eastern half of the country. The ports of the west coast are reached by steamers of the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. from San Francisco and Balboa and way ports, and by those of the Salvador Railway Co.'s steamship service from Salina Cruz (Mexico) and Balboa and way ports. Bluefields has direct steamship communication with New Orleans, La. (Bluefields Steamship Co.).

Nicaragua is primarily an agricultural country. The western half of the Republic raises coffee for export, and also ships some cacao and sugar. Corn, beans, rice, some other vegetables, and tobacco, and fruits are grown for home consumption. Bananas constitute the principal product and export of the eastern section, and some coconuts are shipped. Cattle are raised extensively in the western half of the country, and a few in the eastern part. Gold mining is carried on in different parts of the Republic and about $1,000,000 worth is exported annually. The mining industry, however, is not yet well developed. Some timber is cut in both the eastern and the western sections, and cabinet and dye woods are exported.

The eastern half of the Republic has practically no manufacturing industries, while those of the western section are carried on on a small scale, and most of them in a primitive way. There are eight sugar mills (one producing about 4,800 tons per annum and the others from 100 to 750 tons each), a number of distilleries making rum, a small railroad machine shop, a nail factory, several electric-light plants, ice factories, and cotton gin mills, about a dozen small sawmills, three shoemaking establishments (which, while they use some machinery, can hardly be called factories), several soap factories, some saddlery shops, and a small felt hat factory. Furniture is made in small carpenters' and cabinet makers' shops. A little weaving is done on hand looms. The country people make palm and straw hats and baskets in their homes, and hammocks and rope are also of household manufacture. Raw materials are not usually imported directly by the manufacturers (except soap making materials and wire for nails), but are ordered through general merchants.

The principal imports of the Republic are (1) cotton goods, (2) manufactures of iron and steel, (3) wheat flour, (4) rice, (5) liquors, wines, beer, etc., and (6) drugs, medicines, and chemicals. The leading exports are coffee, gold, bananas, hides and skins, cabinet woods, and rubber. Cacao, dyewoods, sugar, coconuts, cotton, and a number of minor products are also exported.

BLUEFIELDS.

Bluefields, port of entry on the east coast of Nicaragua, is at the mouth of the Escondido River, 1,236 miles from New Orleans. Capital of Department of Zelaya. Population about 4,000. Reached by two regular steamers a week from New Orleans. No regular communication with any other foreign port. The Bluefields Fruit & Steamship Co., has a wireless station here. Government telegraph line to Managua, the capital. Small sailing vessels from Bluefields carry on a coasting trade with other ports on the east coast of Nicaragua. One small steamer a week runs 65 miles up the Escondido River to Rama. Distant points in the interior reached by canoes from Bluefields and other ports on the east coast. An American consul is located here.

CHINANDEGA.

Chinandega, the head of the Department of the same name, is situated on the railway line, 13 miles from the port of Corinto, in a rich grazing and agricultural district which produces cattle, corn, beans, sugar cane, and some coffee, cotton, cabulla (for rope making), pita (for hammocks), fruit, and wild rubber. A considerable amount of sugar is made in the Department, and also rum, cheese, butter, saddlery, rope, and hammocks. There are two ice factories in the Department, and a number of sawmills and several small cotton gin mills. The section exports considerable quantities of dyewoods, and supplies cabinet woods and building lumber to the neighboring Department of Leon. In Chinandega there is an agency of the Anglo-Central American Commercial Bank (Ltd.), of Managua. The population is approximately 20,000.

CORINTO.

Corinto is the principal port of western Nicaragua. About 59 per cent of the foreign commerce of the country passes through it. There is a wharf at which steamers discharge and load, and a railway line to various interior points. Corinto has no industries and very little mercantile business.

The principal concerns are customs brokers, but they sometimes import staple articles. The retail stores are small. The population is about 1,400. There is an American consul here.

GRANADA.

Granada is situated on Lake Nicaragua and at the terminal of the railway, 118 miles from the port of Corinto. It is the distributing point for the Department of Chontales, on the other side of the lake, which is an important cattle and mining district.

Granada is a city of some wealth and considerable retail trade. Some shoes are manufactured, and there is an ice factory, a sawmill, and a sugar factory. Coffee is the principal product of the surrounding district, and a considerable amount of cacao is also grown. The Banco Nacional de Nicaragua (Inc.) has a branch in Granada, and the other two Managua banks have agencies. The population is about 25,000.

LEON.

Leon, the head of the Department of Leon, is situated on the railway line, 35 miles from the port of Corinto. It is in an important agricultural section producing corn, beans, and rice, and also considerable numbers of cattle. The Department has some mines. Leon is the principal industrial city of the Republic, shoes hats, saddles, bridles, saddlebags, rope, leather, tiles and brick, soap, nails, hammocks, and some cotton textiles (made on hand looms) being manufactured on a small scale. There are some goldsmiths and silversmiths, several establishments for bottling carbonated waters, an ice factory, and a sawmill. Considerable quantities of rum (aguardiente) and sugar are made in the Department. Leon is the distributing point for the Departments of Nueva Segovia, Esteli, Jinotega, and Matagalpa, and the point of concentration for the produce of these Departments. In this city there is a branch of the Banco Nacional de Nicaragua (Inc.), and agencies of the other two banks of Managua, the Commercial Bank of Spanish America (Ltd.), and the Anglo-Central American Commercial Bank (Ltd.). The population is approximately 40,000.

MANAGUA.

Managua, the capital of the republic, is situated on the railway line, 87 miles from the port of Corinto, and on the shore of Lake Managua. It is the point of concentration of one of the large coffee regions and a distributing point for places on or near the northern and eastern shores of the lake, as well as a retail center for various kinds of merchandise, especially fancy goods. Shoes, saddles, bridles, and saddlebags, soap, and soda water are manufactured on a small scale. There is an electric-light plant, an ice factory, a railroad shop, and some coffee beneficios and sawmills in the city and vicinity. Managua has three banks—the Banco Nacional de Nicaragua (Inc.), Commercial Bank of Spanish America (Ltd.), and the Anglo-Central American Commercial Bank (Ltd.). The population is approximately 30,000. An American consul is located here.

REPUBLIC OF PANAMA.

The Republic of Panama, formerly a Department of the Republic of Colombia, obtained its independence from that country on November 3, 1903, and forms what might be the joining link between South and Central America. It consists of eight Provinces with an area of 32,300 square miles and an estimated population of about 400,000. The land is mountainous and also low and swampy in places. The best cattle and agricultural lands lie to the north, chiefly in the Province of Chiriqui, while the great region from Panama city south to the Colombian border remains practically unexplored.

Little mining is carried on in the country and there are no industries worth mentioning. Panama's chief source of wealth lies in its potential agricultural possibilities, but agricultural development has been greatly retarded until now by feeble encouragement and an almost total absence of good roads in the interior.

The principal exports of the country are bananas, hides, cocobolo, tagua nuts, coconuts, balata, rubber, and ipecac. The principal imports from the United States are food products, lumber, shoes, cotton goods, tobacco, drugs, hardware, furniture, liquors, etc.

The principal cities in size and importance are Panama, Colon, and David.

PANAMA.

Panama, the capital of the Republic, and first city in point of population, lies on the Pacific side of the Isthmus and about 4 miles from Balboa, the Pacific port of the Panama Canal, and forms the main outlet for cattle and agricultural products from the northern Provinces. The principal imports from the United States are food products, lumber, cotton goods, shoes, hardware, tobacco, liquors, wood manufactures, etc. With the exception of a local brewery, several soft-drink bottling works, and a small soap factory there are no industries. The estimated population of the city is 47,000. There is an American consulate in Panama.

BOCAS DEL TORO.

Bocas del Toro is situated in the northernmost part of Panama, on the Atlantic coast, near the Costa Rican border. It is divided from the latter country and from the Pacific section of Panama by mountain ranges. The country is low and swampy. The principal industry is raising bananas, which is controlled by the United Fruit Co. There are no factories. The principal imports are cotton goods, food products, lumber, boots and shoes, and drugs. There are no exclusive dealers in any one article. The population of the town is about 2,000, mostly Jamaican Negroes. There is an American consular agency here.

COLON.

Colon, the second city in point of population in the Republic of Panama, is situated on the Atlantic side of the Isthmus, at the entrance to the Panama Canal. It immediately adjoins the Canal Zone port of Cristobal, and must practically be regarded as forming with Cristobal the Atlantic terminal port of the Canal. The principal imports from the United States are cotton goods, food products, lumber, boots and shoes, cigars, cigarettes and tobacco, furniture, petroleum, liquors, hardware, and drugs and medicines. There are no industries. The commercial importance of Colon, which is potentially very great, lies in its exceptionally favorable situation as a distributing center. The population of the city is about 29,000. There is an American consulate at Colon.

DAVID.

David is the capital as well as the principal city of the Province of Chiriqui, one of the largest and richest Provinces in the Republic. It is located on the David River, about 5 miles from Pedregal, its port, on a broad rolling plain in the center of some of the finest cattle country in the Republic and is the market for the produce of that section. It has telegraph, telephone, and steamship communication with the city of Panama, although the last named is susceptible of considerable improvement. It has an estimated population of about 5,000.

WEST INDIES.

BAHAMA ISLANDS.

The Bahama Islands, belonging to Great Britain, consist of a group of about 700 islands or rocky islets lying northeast of Cuba and east of the coast of Florida. With a soil similar to that of certain sections of Florida and with a climate better adapted, by reason of its continual mildness even in midwinter, for the cultivation of citrus and other fruits, spices, and vegetables of many kinds, the future of the Bahama Islands would appear to lie in the development of its horticultural and agricultural resources; and the success that has attended recent experiments in blasting and planting the rocky soil near Miami, Fla., would seem to point the way by which this development can be brought about. The estimated population of the Bahamas in 1914 was 55,766. This meager population is distributed among islands that are scattered over 700 miles of sea, and less than one-sixth of the inhabitants are Caucasians.

NASSAU (NEW PROVIDENCE).

Nassau, the capital city of the Bahamas, situated on the northern side of the island of New Providence, having a population of about 15,000, two-thirds of which are colored, lies about 200 miles east from Miami, Fla. It has steamship communication with New York and Miami, but only during the winter season with the latter place except by small craft.

From the United States are imported flour, hominy, boots and shoes, medium-grade groceries, cotton piece goods, coal, shooks and empty boxes, empty tins, considerable hardware, sail canvas, haberdashery, dry goods, notions, automobiles and bicycles, carriages, packing products, meats in cold storage, and paints and varnishes. The exports to the United States consist principally of sisal hemp, sponges, bark, tinned pineapples, citrus fruit, vegetables, and old metal. To other countries, sponges constitute the chief article of export. Yellow pine is shipped to Cuba.

There are two pineapple canneries in the Bahamas, one of which is at Nassau. There are no factories. Sisal hemp is to a certain extent cleaned by machinery. The pot-hole surface is excellent for agricultural purposes. There is an American consulate here.

BARBADOS.

Barbados, the most eastern of the West Indies, belongs to Great Britain, and has an area of 166 square miles, and in 1911 had a population of 172,000. The principal industry is agriculture, but sugar and sea-island cotton are the chief products. The only mineral is "manjak" a form of asphalt mined in small quantities and exported to the United States, where it is used in varnish manufacture. Hard bread or biscuits are manufactured and shipped to the neighboring colonies.

In 1913 the products and manufactures of the colony exported were valued at $2,567,594 and the total exportations at $4,168,731, British North America taking $1,742,290 worth and the United States $336,879. The imports amounted to $6,584,662, the United States contributing about its usual one-third; the principal items consisting of foodstuffs, textiles, and manufactures of iron, steel, and wood. About one-fourth of the imports are reexported to the neighboring colonies.

The principal city, capital, and only port is Bridgetown, with a population of 35,000. There is an American consulate at this place.

ANTIGUA.

Antigua, British West Indies, one of the Leeward Islands and the seat of the government for the Leeward Islands' Presidency, has an area of 108 square miles and a population, in 1911, of 31,304.

Agriculture is the only industry and about 19,000 of its 69,000 acres are under cultivation. The principal products for export are sugar, molasses, and sea-island cotton. The total trade for 1911 was $1,699,185; imports $913,683 and exports $785,502. Imports, amounting to $418,971 came from the United Kingdom, $112,674 from British North America, and $296,330 from the United States. The exports to the United Kingdom were $58,656, British North America $692,230, and the United States $25,378. The exports of sugar and molasses were valued at $738,924.

Antigua has direct steamship communication with the United States, Canada, and Great Britain.

MONTSERRAT.

Montserrat, British West Indies, one of the Leeward Islands, has an area of 32½ square miles, with a population in 1911 of 12,196. About 6,179 acres of its estimated 25,000 acres are under cultivation.

Agriculture is the only industry, and the principal products are sea island cotton, limes, and cocoa.

The total trade of the colony in 1913 was $360,952; imports, $178,902, and exports, $182,050. Imports amounting to $65,882 came from the United Kingdom; $40,149 from British North America, and $31,608 from the United States; the balance, mostly from the other British colonies. Of the exports, the United Kingdom took $129,025 worth; British North America, $4,808; the United States, $6,687; and the other British colonies practically the remainder.

The largest single item of export was cotton lint, valued at $97,831; lime products second with $28,800.

There is no direct steamship connection with the United States; but the United Kingdom and Canada have direct communication.

ST. LUCIA.

St. Lucia, British West Indies, has an area of about 238 square miles, and a population, in 1911, of 48,607. About 13,000 of its 152,000 acres are under cultivation.

The principal agricultural products are sugar with its by-products of molasses and rum, cacao, and limes.

The total trade in 1912 amounted to $2,934,877, imports $1,534,705, and exports $1,400,172.

Imports from the United Kingdom were $362,904; British North America, $64,546; and the United States, $954,123, which included $689,100 for coal for bunkering purposes. The exports to the United Kingdom were $341,601; British North America, $41,275; and the United States, $11,524; bunker coal was supplied to steamers to the value of $809,358.

Port Castries, the capital, has a sheltered harbor with good wharf facilities, and is doing a large business in furnishing bunker coal to steamers. The depth of water is sufficient for deep-draft steamers to lie alongside the coaling docks, where rapid coaling facilities are available. The importations of coal for this purpose in 1912 amounted to 129,000 tons, all coming from the United States.

There is an American consular agent at Port Castries.

ST. VINCENT.

St. Vincent, British West Indies, one of the Windward Islands, covers an area of about 140 square miles. The estimated acreage is 93,987 acres, of which 20,000 acres are under cultivation. It has a population of 41,877. The principal industry is agriculture.

The total trade in 1912 was $1,172,184; imports, $628,671; and the exports, $543,513. Nearly 41 per cent of the imports were from the United Kingdom; 18 per cent from British North America; and 19.6 per cent from the United States. Of the exports 68 per cent went to the United Kingdom, less than 3 per cent to British North America, and about the same amount to the United States.

Arrowroot forms the largest single item of export, valued at $237,646; cotton lint second, at $165,576; cocoa third, at $21,250; cotton seed fourth, at $16,367; and sugar and molasses fifth, with a value of $11,588. These five items make nearly 90 per cent of the exports of products and manufactures of the colony.

There is direct steamship communication with the United Kingdom and Canada but none with the United States. There is an American consular agency at Kingstown, the capital.

BERMUDA.

Bermuda Islands consist of a group of islands in the North Atlantic Ocean belonging to Great Britain. There are only five islands of any importance, namely, Bermuda, Somerset, Ireland, St. George, and St. David. The imports from the United States in 1913 amounted to $1,582,844. The principal exports are potatoes, onions, vegetables, arrowroot, and hides, all of which are exported for about seven months each year commencing in December and ending the last of June. Bermuda has good banking facilities. The Quebec Steamship Co. of Canada and the Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. have regular weekly service between New York and Bermuda and during the winter season the service is supplemented by additional steamers.

HAMILTON.

Hamilton is the capital and principal town in Bermuda. It is situated on the coast of Main Island and its harbor, which is entered through a long and intricate passage, admits vessels of considerable draft. An American consulate is located here.

CUBA.

Cuba, the largest of the West India Islands, is situated at the mouth of the Gulf of Mexico, 130 miles south of Florida. It measures 730 miles in length along its axial line from east to west and varies in width from about 90 miles in the eastern part to less than 20 miles on the meridian of longitude a short distance west of Habana. The climate of Cuba is essentially tropical, hot and dry during the greater part of the year. A considerable extent of country is appropriated to cattle breeding and to farms on which are raised vegetables, maize, mallochia grass, cassava, onions, garlic, poultry, wax, and honey. The principal fruits of the island are lemons, oranges, pineapples, bananas, and sweet limes. About two-thirds of the inhabitants are Spanish-speaking whites. The most populous city is Habana and the second in importance is Santiago de Cuba.

ANTILLA.

Antilla is situated on Nipe Bay, on the north coast of Cuba, about 125 miles north of Santiago de Cuba. It has a population of about 2,000. It is the north coast terminal of the Cuba Railroad, and the principal port of import and export for the towns on the line of the railroad between that place and the city of Camaguey. The exports amount to about $14,000,000 annually, and consist principally of sugar, iron ore, and hardwoods. The value of the imports approximates $5,000,000 and consists of coal, provisions, clothing, shoes, hardware, sugar machinery, and railroad equipment and supplies. There is a consular agency at Antilla.

The following firms, etc., are located in the various towns, as indicated, in the district of the consular agency at Antilla:

CAIBARIEN.

Caibarien is a town with a population of about 12,000. It has good railroads and convenient train service to all parts of the island. The port of Caibarien ranks fifth in Cuba in the collection of revenue and offers special facilities for handling incoming merchandise. It has excellent direct steamship connections with ports of the United States and also with Europe. The principal places supplied through Caibarien are Yaguajay, Zulueta, Placetas, Camajuani, Las Vueltas, and Remedios. A railroad has recently been subsidized by the Government. The road will soon be constructed. It will open an immense new district of unlimited natural resources. The exportation of sugar in 1913 amounted to 1,068,164 bags, or some 160,000 tons. The total value of all exports was $7,087,129, and imports were valued at $3,874,779. There is an American consular agency at this place.

CAMAGUEY.

Camaguey is situated in the Province of the same name (formerly Puerto Principe), on the line of the Cuba Railroad Co., 240 miles west of Santiago de Cuba. It is the center of a large cattle-raising district. Importations are made through the ports of Antilla and Nuevitas, and consist of flour, rice, hams, bacon, lard, canned and cured meats and fish, staple and fancy groceries, wines and liquors, drugs and druggists' supplies, hardware, machinery, furniture, cotton, silk and linen fabrics, and ready-made clothing. The headquarters of the Cuba Railroad Co. are located here. Camaguey is in the Nuevitas consular district.

CIENFUEGOS.

The city of Cienfuegos, Province of Santa Clara, known as the Pearl of the South, was founded April 22, 1819, by Col. Luis De Clouet, of the Spanish Army, the city being named for the captain general, at that time, Jose Cienfuegos. Cienfuegos has a population of some 40,000 inhabitants, and is second only in importance to Habana in regard to commerce, and, in view of its proximity to the Panama Canal, its importance is not exceeded by any harbor in the West Indies.

In 1913 the immediate district surrounding the port produced 2,454,299 bags of sugar, or 35,611 tons of centrifugal sugar, valued at $17,179,853. There are 26 mills which grind for Cienfuegos, together with several others in the Province. Tobacco is grown here in large quantities. Rich pastures support many cattle. Lumber is cut in the wooded sections. Fine coffee is grown in the Trinidad Mountains, a short distance from the city. Honey and wax are produced here.

In 1913 the total foreign trade amounted to $25,154,848; the imports were valued at $8,599,080, of which the United States furnished $4,855,240, an increase of nearly $1,000,000 over the previous year. The exports amounted to $16,555,768, of which the United States received $15,333,238. The total declared exports to the United States from this consular district reached the large sum of $28,811,238.

During the year 1913 299 vessels of 534,787 net tons arrived at this port, 261 of which cleared for the United States.

HABANA.

Habana is by far the most important market in Cuba, and therefore entering the Habana market is almost equivalent to securing a general Cuban trade. It is situated on the west side of a most capacious and beautiful harbor. The chief articles of export are sugar, tobacco, cigars, molasses, beeswax, and honey. There is an American consulate at this place.

ISLE OF PINES.

The Isle of Pines is 35 miles south of the coast of Cuba to which it belongs. It has an area of about 900 square miles with a mild salubrious climate. The principal products are cattle, tobacco, pine, mahogany, cedar, and other woods, sulphur, pitch, tar, and spirits of turpentine. The capital, Nueva Gerona, has an American consular agency. Almost all the imports of the Isle of Pines have heretofore been entered through Habana, but in the future considerable quantities will enter at Nueva Gerona and Los Indios.

MANZANILLO.

Manzanillo is a port on the south coast of Cuba, about 175 miles west of Santiago de Cuba. According to the last census, 1907, the population was 15,819, but the inhabitants probably number now over 20,000. It is the center of a large tobacco and sugar producing district. The exports consist principally of sugar, hardwoods, hides of neat cattle, honey, and beeswax, and amount approximately to $5,500,000 annually. The value of the imports is about equal to that of the exports. They consist chiefly of flour, lard, bacon, rice, soap, candles, potatoes, hardware, shoes, hats, clothing, lumber, and coal. It is the terminal of the Bayamo branch of the Cuba Railroad Co. and a distributing point for a large developing territory. An American consular agency is located here.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA.

Santiago de Cuba is the capital of the province of Oriente. The population in 1907 was 53,614. It is the principal seaport of eastern Cuba and the second city in the island in population and in commercial and industrial importance. It is the distributing center for a large surrounding territory. It is the center of a mining district, iron predominating, though copper is also mined. Exports from the port to the United States amount to approximately $6,000,000 annually, and consist chiefly of iron and copper ores, sugar, cocoa, salted green hides, cedar and mahogany logs, lignum-vitæ, honey, beeswax, rum, and citrus fruits.

The imports amount to about $8,500,000 annually, of which the United States supplies a little over one-half, and consist of flour, rice, red beans, potatoes, garlic, codfish, hams, bacon, lard, butter, staple and fancy groceries, canned corn, peas, tomatoes and fruits, jams and preserves, wines and liquors, cotton and woolen goods, silks, fancy and toilet articles, drugs and pharmaceutical products, hardware, glassware, porcelain and enameled ware, machinery, agricultural implements, lumber and building materials, roofing tiles, cement, sanitary supplies and appliances, railway supplies and equipment, coal, stationery and office supplies, and furniture. An American consulate is located here.

CURACAO.

Curacao, with an area of 212 square miles, is the largest of the Dutch West India Islands. It is 41 miles from the Venezuelan coast. It is 40 miles in length and the maximum breadth is 10 miles. On the south is a fine harbor called St. Ann's Bay. Good salt and lime phosphate are exported. Sugar, cotton, cacao, and tobacco are cultivated. There is an American consulate located here.

BONAIRE.

Bonaire is an island of about 130 square miles, situated 31 miles east of the island of Curacao. It is part of the Dutch colonial possessions in the West Indies. Its population is about 6,500. The principal products are salt, straw hats, divi-divi, and aloes. The entire exports of the island average around $50,000 per year. The imports amount to about $80,000 per annum, and consist chiefly of foodstuffs. The majority of the inhabitants are very poor.

The amount of business done by merchants is small and their stocks are confined to the necessities of life. All merchants import goods direct to some extent.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC.

The Dominican Republic is a State of the West Indies occupying the eastern and larger part of the island of Haiti, it being nearly twice as large as the Republic of Haiti. The area is about 18,000 square miles. The greater part of the Republic is amenable to successful cultivation, and many of the tropical and subtropical staples are grown on large plantations, especially in the south and west of the Republic. The chief agricultural products exported are sugar, coffee, cacao, and tobacco. The chief port is Puerto Plata.

AZUA.[1]

Azua, which is in the Santo Domingo consular district, the region producing practically all the sugar in the Republic, is 55 miles southwest of the city of Santo Domingo. An American consular agency is located here.

SANTIAGO.

Santiago de los Caballeros, which is the full name of this town, is the largest in northern Santo Domingo, and is the chief commercial city. It is in the middle of the tobacco-raising district. Large quantities of leaf tobacco are packed here for export, and in addition there are two tobacco factories, which manufacture cigars and cigarettes chiefly for domestic consumption. It is 42 miles distant by railroad from Puerto Plata, the seaport through which its exports and imports pass. Population is estimated at 14,000.

SANTO DOMINGO.

Santo Domingo, the capital of the Dominican Republic, situated on the south coast, at the mouth of the Ozama River, is a port and commercial center.

Imports into the consular district, which embraces the Provinces of Azua, Santo Domingo, Seybo, San Pedro de Macoris, and Barahona, from the United States during the year 1913 amounted to nearly $3,500,000. Exports to the United States amounted to nearly $2,500,000.

GRANADA.

The colony of Granada is one of the smaller of the British possessions in the West Indies. It has an area of 133 square miles, an estimated population of 69,000, and a total trade of $1,750,000. The revenues amount to approximately $425,000 annually, and the expenditures to an equal sum. Cocoa and nutmegs are the chief products of the colony. There is an American consular agency here.

ST. GEORGES.

St. Georges is the capital of the colony and its chief town. It is situated at the southwestern extremity of the island, on a promontory. In 1911 the population of the town was 4,916. Two steamship lines from England, one from the United States, and one from Canada call fortnightly.

The following firms are located in St. Georges, Granada, with the few exceptions noted:

GUADELOUPE.

Guadeloupe is situated in the Atlantic Ocean, 15° 59′ north latitude and 63° 32′ west longitude. It forms a part of the Group des Petites Antilles, also called Windward Islands, or Caribbean Isles.

Guadeloupe is composed of two distinct isles, separated by a strait, "Riviere-Salee" (Salt River), 6 miles in length extending from north to south. The strait is only navigable for vessels of small tonnage, owing to mud banks and shoals. The north entrance of the Riviere-Salee opens into an enormous bay called Grand Cul de Sac; the south entrance opens into a bay less deep, called Petit Cul de Sac, surrounded by charming islets. It is at the lower end of this Petit Cul de Sac, that the city of Pointe a Pitre is located. The isle situated to the west of the Riviere-Salee is called Guadeloupe, or Basse Terre; the isle situated to the east bears the name of Grande Terre, the chief city of which is Pointe-a-Pitre.

The population of Guadeloupe and its five dependents is 212,430 inhabitants. The literate population is 85,370. The value of exports and imports for the year 1913 was $3,637,498 and $4,042,185, respectively. The exports to the United States amounted to $71,473, consisting of vanilla beans, bay oil, bay leaves, dried cocoa nuts, and goat skins. The United States furnished imports amounting to $864,240.

BASSE TERRE.

Basse Terre, the capital of Guadeloupe, is a seaport on an open roadstead of the southwest coast. It has a population of 8,184. A branch of the Banque de la Guadeloupe of Pointe a Pitre is located here. There is an American consulate at this place.

POINTE A PITRE.

Pointe a Pitre, with a population of 22,664, is 41 miles by road from Basse Terre. Regular communication between the two places is maintained by daily automobile mail and passenger service, and by a small steamer making the round trip from Pointe a Pitre twice a week; the distance one way being 65 miles. It is the chief commercial city of the colony, entering 94 per cent of the imports and clearing 80 per cent of the exports. The principal exports are sugar and rum. It is in the Guadeloupe consular district.

HAITI.

Haiti is a rich and beautiful island, the largest in the West Indies, except Cuba, from which it is separated by the Windward Passage. The island is nearly 400 miles long and from 60 to 150 miles broad, and comprises two republics, Haiti in the west and Santo Domingo in the east. The area is about 29,000 square miles. The climate is tropical. The principal exports are mahogany, logwood, coffee, lignum-vitæ, tobacco, cacao, and sugar.

AUX CAYES.

Aux Cayes is on the southern coast of Haiti, about 92 miles southwest of Port au Prince. It exports coffee and logwood. The population is estimated at about 25,000.

CAPE HAITIEN.

Cape Haitien is a seaport town on the north coast of Haiti and 85 miles northeast of Port au Prince. Imports from the United States in 1912 amounted to $952,765 and consisted of provisions, cotton goods, kerosene, drugs and medicines, hardware, notions, and some shoes and machinery, while the exports to the United States were valued at $63,525 and consisted mainly of cocoa, goatskins, and logwood. An American consulate is located here.

PORT ANTONIO.

Port Antonio on the northeastern coast is the center of the Jamaica fruit trade and a port of call for many passenger vessels during the winter months, when large numbers of American tourists visit the island. It is the principal market of that section of Jamaica, the chief industry of which is banana and coconut cultivation. During 1913, 463 vessels were dispatched to the United States, laden with fruits and nuts.

The exports of this port and of Port Maria, the next town of importance, 40 miles westward, are about $1,893,000, annually, composed principally of fruit, coconuts, and cocoa.

Imports from the United States are foodstuffs, boots and shoes, cotton goods, lumber, petroleum, coal, hardware, and notions.

There is an American consulate at Port Antonio and a consular agency at Port Maria.

MARTINIQUE.

Martinique is one of the French West India Islands. It has an area of 280 square miles and a population of 190,000. About two-fifths of the island is under cultivation; sugar, rum, and cocoa are the principal products, and chief exports. The trade is worth about $10,000,000 annually; exports about $5,800,000 and imports $4,200,000. France furnishes about 50 per cent of the imports and takes practically all of the exports; the United States furnishes about 34 per cent of the imports—the principal items being flour, coal, manufactures of wood, cottonseed oil, kerosene, and provisions.

FORT DE FRANCE.

Fort de France, capital of Martinique, is on the west coast, and is its chief city. It is the terminus of the French trans-Atlantic steamships and the West India cable system. Population, 30,000. There is an American consulate at this place.

PORTO RICO.

Favorable climatic conditions, excellent drainage, and an unsually productive soil have made the island of Porto Rico well adapted for agriculture, upon which its manufactures are entirely dependent. In the lowland plains, only a little above the level of the sea, the soil is alluvial and rich, and here the sugar cane, the island's most productive crop, is grown. On the slopes of the upland hills, 600 to 2,400 feet above sea level, tobacco and coffee thrive, these crops ranking second and third in importance.

The Bureau of Insular Affairs, War Department, supplied the following list of Porto Rican importers:

ST. THOMAS.

St. Thomas, commercially the most important of the three islands forming the Danish West Indian possessions, covers an area of 33 square miles. The trade, which was once extensive, has been transferred to Barbados. The island is a coaling station. Charlotte Amalie is the seaport and chief city of the island. There is an American consul here.

TRINIDAD.

Trinidad, an island of the British West Indies, second in size to Jamaica, lies off the coast of Venezuela and opposite the northern mouth of the Orinoco. The Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. maintains a fortnightly service between Trinidad and Southampton, the ships also going on to Venezuelan ports, to Colon and New York. The total foreign trade of the colony for the calender year 1911 was $47,570,103, of which amount $24,390,401 was imports and $23,179,702 exports. There is an American consul at this place.

PORT OF SPAIN.

Port of Spain, the capital of the colony of Trinidad and Tobago, is situated in the northwestern part of the island of Trinidad on the Gulf of Paria. Its estimated population is 65,000.

The harbor is safe but shallow, and from Port of Spain is shipped not only the produce of the colony but also that from the Orinoco region. The value of exports from the colony approximates $14,000,000, the chief exports being cocoa, sugar, and asphalt. The imports into the colony also average about $14,000,000 annually, the United Kingdom supplying slightly over 30 per cent and the United States slightly less than 30 per cent of the total. The value of transit goods is more than $10,000,000 annually.

TURKS ISLANDS.

Turks Island is a dependency under the government of Jamaica, geographically a portion of the Bahamas, of which it forms the southeastern group. The government is administered by a commissioner, assisted by a legislative board of six members, four of whom are appointed by the Crown. The seat of government is at Grand Turk. The most important industry is salt raking; sponge and fiber industries are also carried on. There is a cable station at Grand Turk. An American consulate is located at this place.
